Analysis of Eveline James Joyce's "Eveline", one of the short stories in "The Dubliners", is a tale based upon the friction which can exist between familial and romantic love, the conflicts between the opposite choices of perpetuating the status quo versus initiating irreversible change, and the agonies that are experienced when pivotal decisions have to be made and powerful but divergent emotions inevitably collide.

Eveline Analysis - eNotes

In Eveline by James Joyce we have the theme of memory, responsibility, decisions, conflict, escape, guilt, paralysis and letting go (or rather the inability to let go). Taken from his Dubliners collection the story is narrated in the third person by an unknown narrator and from the opening lines of the story it is apparent that Joyce is delving into one of the major themes of the story, that of memory.

Feminist Critical Analysis of "Eveline" by Jem Ryan on Prezi

"Eveline" is an example of naturalistic fiction in which the protagonist, described at one point as a "helpless animal," responds to internal anxieties and environmental forces, particularly the influences of family life and the responsibilities to which she has been conditioned, and of a working life in Ireland,...

Analysis. Though short and easy to read, this story is devastating, possibly the most powerful in the book. (The other candidate for that honor would be "The Dead.") It is yet another Dubliners tale about paralysis, as Eveline stands on the pier at story's end, frozen in place by fear and guilt. She wants to leave Ireland, but she quite literally cannot move, speak, or even express emotion on her face.

Short Story Analysis: Eveline by James Joyce - The Sitting Bee

Analysis. James Joyce wrote the story of Eveline in 1914. Eveline is the title of the main character in the short story and it shows how she was affected by feminism during her life time. Joyce states that, "the feminist issues affecting Eveline are in her relationship with her boyfriend Frank, relatives, duties, obligations,..."

Critical Analysis Of Eveline By

Yet Dubliners redefined the short story and is now viewed as a classic work of modernist fiction, with each of its fifteen short stories repaying close analysis. 'Eveline' focuses on a young Irish woman of nineteen years of age, who plans to leave her abusive father and poverty-stricken existence in Ireland, and seek out a new, better life for herself and her lover Frank in Buenos Aires.
