You can always try doing it with the pin code method, and if the pin doesn't work, see if the numbers update. If they don't, go back and get a new pin. I can see the new models having a different BCM that could have an expiring pin since everything nowadays is connected to satellites somehow, but you have a 2014 (same year as mine) so as far as I know, that pin should be good for life.

Go to the parts counter, not service and just ask for the 4 digit PIN code for programming a new key fob. At a decent dealer they will ask for proof of ownership and give you a printout and NOT charge you anything. There are two codes, a rolling 5 digit and permanent 4 digit code. The permanent code is all numbers and the temp starts with a letter.

I'm assuming since you're posting in the WK2 Forum and your locksmith is telling you need a pin code, this "key fob" is a RFID chipped security ignition key. Older models had key fobs just to remotely lock/unlock doors that you could program yourself and a locksmith would not be telling you need a pin to do it.

Attached to your VIN, somewhere in a Dodge data base, is the code for your keys that tell locksmiths how to cut the key. Also attached to your VIN is the original PIN/SKIM code if your vehicle has a Transponder key. There are a number of services around that have access to the Dodge data and can supply this data (usually for a fee).
