Love's Executioner. Perhaps it is because of envy-- I too, crave enchantment. Perhaps it is because love and psychotherapy are fundamentally incompatible. The good therapist fights darkness and seeks illumination, while romantic love is sustained by mystery and crumbles upon inspection. I hate to be love's executioner.

I first read Love's Executioner a few years ago and was so taken with it, I've recommended it dozens of times. Recently, I listened to the audio version Love's Executioner: & Other Tales of Psychotherapy, which was great (it also includes an interesting interview with Irvin Yalom) and I heard some things I hadn't picked up when reading it. In fact, I realized this work has such depth, it is ...

In "Love's Executioner," Yalom shares fascinating and true stories from his psychotherapeutic relationships. He tells us that changes were made to protect the identities of his patients, but that he utilizes "symbolically equivalent substitutes," and he admits to fudging some of the dialogue, which is probably little different than anyone's post hoc process notes.
